Seaside Consultants will observe each teacher's instruction, gather data, analyze the data, and then create an instructional data chart for each teacher. The charts will then be compared, and the aggregate data will be compiled for the review.

The school will receive a data-driven baseline of what's happening, what's not happening, and how often it happens across the disciplines and grades.

This information can be used to validate proficient/exemplary teaching and also to serve as data for goals for instructional practice refinement.
